Dear Parishioners,

1. The Rainbow and the Goodness of God

In the First Reading, God gives Noah the sign of the rainbow as a sign of his covenant: God will never again do what he has just done, destroy everything with a flood.

But why isn't it bad enough that God did it once? Where is the goodness of God in the story of the Flood?

The medical treatment for certain cancers gives an analogue helpful here. For certain deadly cancers, doctors can try an autologous bone marrow transplant. The doctor takes bone marrow from the patient and hunts through it to find any cells that are not cancerous. He kills the remaining cancerous bone marrow cells. But he clones the healthy cells and puts them back into the patient. By this severe and painful measure, there is a chance that he can save the life of his patient.

In the story of the flood, God tries the analogue of this same procedure on the human race, which is infected with the sin of Adam and doomed to die because of it. God takes a few morally healthy human beings and puts them into a new world, to reproduce there. The morally sick and destructive population of the old world dies in God's flood.

Only there is this difference: in the story of the Flood, the selection between the sick and the healthy is made by the people themselves. Those who aren't on Noah's boat don't want to be on it. They mock Noah for even making the boat. To get on the boat, they would have to acknowledge their sins and accept God's means to safety. They would be among the healthy if they repented, but this is what they refuse to do.

And so the rainbow, which is the sign of God's covenant, is also a sign of his goodness. Even in the flood, God's boat was there, to keep those willing to be on it from death.

As the Gospel reading makes plain, that boat is always there, in Christ, who calls to repentance and carries to salvation all those who do not reject the goodness of God.

POPE FRANCIS' COLUMN

Pope: Regarding the Church, What Is Not Seen Is More Important Than What Is Seen

Despite Our Smallness, Limits, Fragility, Says We Are Called to Carry Out God's Plan

Pope Francis has urged the faithful to not let their limitations and fragile nature interfere with their ability to reach out to others and make a difference.

Addressing thousands of pilgrims gathered for the weekly Wednesday Audience, the Holy Father admitted, "Often as a Church we experience our fragility and our limits," yet, he added, we should not be discouraged since "the Lord has really made an instrument of grace and visible sign of his love for all mankind."

While admitting that our natural human weakness can be discouraging, he reflected that with faith, "we can understand how, despite our smallness and our poverty," the Lord is working through us to make a difference in the lives of others.

"The reality of the visible Church is beyond our control, beyond our strength," the Pope said, as "it's a really mystery because it comes from God."

Recalling last week's catechesis, the Pontiff said it showed the Church has a spiritual nature: "It is the body of Christ, built in the Holy Spirit."

However, he pointed out, when we refer to the Church, "our thoughts turn immediately to our communities, our parishes, our diocese, to the structures in which we usually gather together and, of course, of the component and institutional figures which guide and govern it."

"This," he said, "is the visible reality of the Church."

As such, he said, we must ask two questions: "Are they two different things or the One Church?" and, "If it is the One Church, how can we understand the relationship between its visible and spiritual reality?"

Mystery

Responding to the questions, he made three points.

"First of all," he said, "when we speak of the visible reality of the Church, we must not think only of the Pope, bishops, priests and consecrated persons," because the visible reality of the Church is made up of the many baptized brothers and sisters around the world who "believe, hope and love," and "who do these things which the Lord sent us to do."

The visible reality of the Church "cannot be measured, it cannot be known in all its fullness," he said, since: "How can one know of all the good that is done?"

"You see," Francis continued, "the reality of the visible Church goes beyond our control, beyond our strength, and it is a mysterious reality because it comes from God."

Second, the Pontiff stressed that to understand the relationship in the Church, the relationship between its visible and spiritual realities, "there is no other way but to look to Christ."

Just as in Christ, he explained, "human nature serves the divine in accordance with the fulfillment of Salvation." So, in a similar way, he said, "the visible reality serve the spiritual reality of the Church."

The Church, he stated, is also a mystery, in which "what is not seen is more important than what is seen, and can only be recognized with the eyes of faith."

The third aspect, he noted, involves whether the visible reality can really be at the service of the spiritual.

"Again, we can understand it by looking to Christ," he said, noting: "Look to Christ. You can't go wrong!"

Christ used his humanity, Francis said, to announce and carry out God's plan of redemption and salvation.

Through this visible reality, the sacraments and testimony, "the Church is called every day to get closer to every person," which can be manifested by helping the poor, those who suffer and those who are marginalized, as Jesus did.
